

Cymraeg Gwaith Work Welsh

Fancy brushing up on your Welsh? Go for it!

Do you know that almost a quarter of the population of Wales is fluent or speaks some Welsh? We're all at different levels of course, and there are plenty of us who don't speak any Welsh at all yet but would love to give it a go.

Some of us remember and understand a lot of Welsh from our school days, we haven't used it in years but we can keep up with listening to a conversation. Others speak a bit of Welsh at home with their families. Some of us use Welsh day in day out, at home and at work and others have just picked up a few phrases along the way.

We're a mixed bunch in Wales!

We're pretty sure there are plenty of you who would love to brush up on your Welsh language skills and you're just waiting for that right moment to take the plunge.

Maybe you know you already have the foundations but it's been years since you've used any Welsh. Or you could be a complete novice who thinks the time is right to get to grips with some basic phrases that you could use at work and at home. Or maybe you've already had some Welsh language training and feel you're ready for some serious residential training to take you to fluency.

If this is you then you'll want to know about our new Work Welsh plan. It's a fully funded, flexible work based Welsh language training programme for the public sector.

Talk to your line manager today about what opportunities are available to you, or visit <https://dysgucymraeg.cymru/en/work-welsh/what-work-welsh-can-offer-you/>

